City sets zoning hearing

BY TRACI BONNEY

The Bay St. Louis City Council will hear public comment about a proposed zoning ordinance amendment February 3.

At a Friday meeting, the council set a hearing date of Monday, Feb. 3, 7 p.m., in the Bay High School auditorium or the American Legion post on Green Meadow Road if the auditorium is unavailable.

The proposed amendment before the council was recommended by the Planning and Zoning Commission on a 4-3 split vote after a Thursday night meeting. The commission discussed the proposal, which was drafted by attorneys John Scafide and Donald Rafferty at the request of Mayor Edward Favre, and heard public comment before voting on the matter.

The amendment, if adopted as written, will limit dockside gambling in the city limits to areas adjacent to a commercial highway district — in effect, containing operations to the Bay bridge site where Mardi Gras Casino plans to open a gaming development.

The amendment also calls for the developer to submit a site plan to the city for review by a site plan review committee. The site plan would be required for all construction, reconstruction or alteration on a development.

The plan would have to be approved before a building permit or certificate of occupancy could be issued.

Other provisions in the amendment address the need to regulate impact of the development on the area around it; minimize noise, glare, visual intrusion, nuisance, fumes, vibration and flashing lights caused by the development; protect and safeguard property values of adjacent properties; control traffic congestion, flow and access; provide adequate parking; and be certain the development is appropriately located with respect to transportation, water supply, fire and police protection, waste disposal and other city services.

Commission chairman Dave Reynolds read the resolution and a list of his recommendations, then opened the floor to commission members for comment. This was followed by a brief public forum which preceded the vote.

Thomas Chapman, Kevin Fitzpatrick and Reynolds opposed the resolution, while Clementine Williams, Linda Beauregard, Les Fillingame and Robert Weaver supported it.

Chapman, Fitzpatrick and Reynolds all had expressed concerns that certain regulatory measures had not been included in the resolution.

The commission later passed a separate recommendation listing eight of those concerns. The recommendation was approved on a 5-2 vote, with Williams and Beauregard opposing.

The recommendation, which was submitted to the City Council Friday for consideration, encouraged the city to:

Commissioners, public state resolution views

BY TRACI BONNEY

A proposed zoning amendment that would allow dockside gaming only at the Bay bridge site elicited comment from commission members and residents at a Thursday Planning and Zoning Commission meeting.

Chairman Dave Reynolds read the proposal, then lead the discussion with a list of his recommendations which included the steps needed for the city to hire a full-time development coordinator or city planner to "determine, monitor and make known to the Mayor, Council and general public the identity and application of all laws, regulations and policies pertinent to the development of gaming as a land use in Bay St. Louis."

Reynolds said this coordinator would act within the city's executive branch to guide the formation of ordinances and policies and exercise the authority of the city in administering those ordinances.

Looking back

Gex reflects on tenure as Port & Harbor commissioner

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

As a commissioner of the Hancock County Port and Harbor for the past eight years, Nancy Gex considers herself lucky to have had the opportunity to serve her community in the promotion of its economic development.

The City of Waveland approved Mayor Stella Fritol's recommendation of Marsha Conery Tuesday as its representative on the commission. The governor must ratify the recommendation to complete the appointment.

Until then, Gex will remain on the board, intent on completing a new transportation contract involving the railroad.

"I have chosen to complete my appointment rather than resign. Should I have resigned, Waveland would have been left without representation on the board until the governor is able to make the appointment."

Gex was recommended for the commission seat in 1984 by former Waveland Mayor John Longo. "Governor Allain had expressed a desire to have more women involved in governmental bodies," she explained, "so I believe that how my appointment evolved."

Gex was and has been active in the community since 1964 when she and her husband, attorney Lucien Gex, chose to return to his hometown after residing for the first five years of their marriage in New Orleans.

Same money, less time

Bourgeois proposes shorter hours in lieu of administrative pay raises

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

New Hancock County Superintendent of Education Myrna Bourgeois proposed administrative pay increases Wednesday which took the form of same money, less days.

The amount per day paid to each administrator would be increased, but the overall number of days would gradually be reduced, keeping salaries at their present total.

Bourgeois spoke in favor of the reduction of time, saying administrative workloads can be completed in less days.

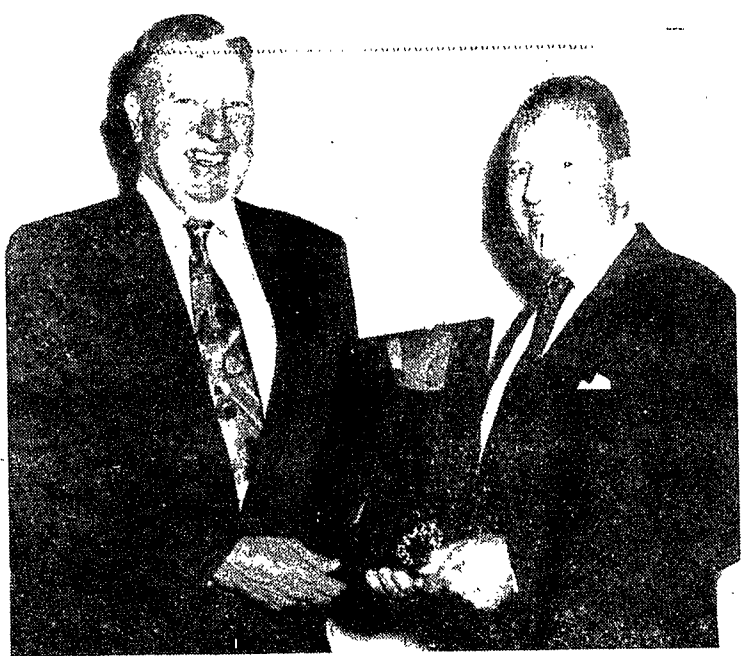

In hourly pay, the administrators will be receiving additional monies, while the district expends the same amount.

Bourgeois said the district will save $8,775 of the $518,168 budgeted for administrative salaries this year, while administrators receive $10,707 in salary increases.

School board members took the proposal by the superintendent under advisement.

Re-evaluation committee appointments included: Lenette Necaise and Carol Bustetter, curriculum committee; Cheryl Bennett, community/board/staff networking and mentoring committee, staff development committee and strategic planning (issues management) committee; Carol Bustetter, public relations committee; and all board members to the board policy update committee.

Zoerners retire as BaySide FD officers

BY T. H. (DOC) TOUPS

Beenie Zoerner and his wife, Carol, are familiar faces to many people in this area. Beenie, former assistant chief of the BaySide Park Volunteer Fire Department, and Carol, a former lieutenant, were frequently seen arriving at fires in BaySide and other parts of the county in their distinctive red truck.

Routine business at the department's Jan. 9 meeting was temporarily held in abeyance as Beenie was presented with a plaque of appreciation on the eve of his retirement as assistant chief. Carol Zoerner also stepped down as lieutenant.

Zoerner, visibly pleased by the surprise presentation, explained that he and Carol joined the department in 1985. He became assistant chief in '86, and Carol became a lieutenant in '87. They have worked in those positions until now. Carol also served as treasurer for five years.

Though they are both retiring from officers' positions, Carol and Beenie intend to remain active as regular members.

Card of Thanks

An open letter to the United Way, friends and supporters of the 1991 Hancock County Doll and Toy Fund:

Now that the holidays are behind us, we at the Bay St. Louis Fire Department would like to take this opportunity to express our sincere gratitude for the continuing support of our friends and donors.

Due to your generosity, 1,171 children, who might not otherwise have received Christmas gifts, were served.

The 1990 Doll and Toy Fund provided gifts for 1,008 children; this year 163 children were added to our Christmas list.

The amount of money expended per gift increased also, averaging $6.43 per child. Each year there seems to be a larger group of children, and we fully expect this trend to continue.

Along with the children and families of Hancock County, the community benefits as well. Because of our firm commitment to patronize local merchants as often as possible, your contribution dollars can turn over many times.

Again, we thank you and look forward to a long and cordial association in this, our joint effort.

Respectfully,

building phase. Jimmy LeBlanc was the director. The commission was involved with putting the finishing touches on the industrial park (Port Bienville). Even though we had tenants out there, it was not a complete project.

"We were lacking full water and sewerage service, and some of the other amenities needed before we could market it as a full-fledged industrial park."

"I call that the building era, of which I came in on the end. Both the industrial park and the air park, weren't finished to the extent that you could do significant marketing."

Nancy Gex

Gex stated that just as she was beginning to see the two facilities reach a level of marketability, LeBlanc retired.

She added that the change in directorship complimented the change of direction needed.

"Jimmy (LeBlanc) was a very industrious building director, and 'Buz' (Harold Olsen, current director) is a very industrious marketing director."

"They each have fulfilled the needs of a director for the time frame within which Jimmy has worked and 'Buz' is working. They are doing entirely different things, but there were entirely different needs, too. Each phase has been very interesting to watch develop."

Gex said the new turn brought her personally involved with three projects, the railroad committee, the building committee and a tri-county endeavor for marketing promotion, which touched on an international level.

RAILROAD COMMITTEE

As chairman of the railroad committee, Gex discovered that the GE Plastics facility, then Borg-Warner, was sending railroad cars to Alabama to be internally washed prior to loading the cars at the Port Bienville facility.

"I thought," Gex related, "if they are having to have this done somewhere else, and paying to do so, why not offer this service here? Possibly, down the road, we may even have some other tenants who may require this same service."

"We sent an engineer along with a representative from the commission to view one of these car washes and develop a plan for construction."

"It has turned out to be a very good idea, as it has not only paid for itself, but it has picked up a lot of tabs out there."

"It has proven to be a wonderful source of income for the whole operation. It has enabled us to provide another service for our tenants along with bringing money into Hancock County that was previously being spent elsewhere."

Another railroad improvement Gex names is an ongoing maintenance program. "In the long run, this has saved us a tremendous amount of money because ongoing maintenance really cuts down the incidence of deterioration that can occur with a railroad."

"We have contracted with a local man, who has a crew that does all of our rail maintenance."

"When I started out with the railroad committee, we had some very old equipment. We were able to buy three used locomotives, of which eventually we sold two, and made more money than it cost us to purchase the three."

"Now we are leasing. We have reached the point where it is less expensive to lease a locomotive than it is to own it and pay for the maintenance and repairs."

"We have sold all but one, and we just swapped the leased locomotive for a larger one because of the recent increase of work load at the park."

Gex interjected that when she began work with the railroad committee, the railroad had operated at a loss for the commission. Today, because of these various changes, the railroad is one of the most profitable of the commission's endeavors.

NEW BUILDING

Another project that Gex names as significant has been the building of the new Port and Harbor Commission office in Waveland.

"I am pleased that we were able to move out of that double trailer that served the needs of the commission for so many years and into a modern facility."

"Serving as committee chairman for the new building was a terrific experience."

The Port and Harbor Commission operated out of a double trailer located on Highway 603 to the rear of the Waveland Resort Inn since its founding days.

Gex said the necessity for adequate room to meet with prospective investors demanded the commission relocate.

"Large companies will come in with teams, and you may have three different meetings going on at the same time when you are trying to conclude a deal of some sort, land sales, contracts. All the different entities that make up an industry."

"You have to be able to accommodate these sort of activities."

"As a resident of Waveland, I am very glad the office was relocated there; but the primary reason for that particular site was its proximity to both parks. We are near the Waveland-Kiln Road, which leads to the Stennis Air Park and, of course, we are located on Highway 90 which brings you to Port Bienville."

"Getting that building is something the commission is very, very proud of accomplishing."

TRI-COUNTY MARKETING

"Something else, which I think has been one of the most important things I have seen accomplished, has been a tri-county endeavor in marketing the Gulf Coast region."

"I and Dave McDonald traveled with representatives of Harrison and Jackson County to London, England in July of 1985. While there, we met with the London Chamber of Commerce and participated in an endeavor to market the Coastal region."

"It was the first time the three counties had ever joined to do a project."

"It is far less expensive for each county to be able to advertise and market together. You can do so much more together than individually, and it gives an industrialist or a manufacturer looking for another site the opportunity to view the overall area and then choose a location."

"Even if someone comes in and chooses a site in Jackson or Harrison County, Hancock County still benefits. Mississippi benefits."

"We have been able to do a lot through a three-county endeavor that we could not have done on our own."

"It has been a marvelous thing to see people pull together. I have seen a lot of pulling together in the last eight years that didn't exist before."

Gex said for the future, she would expect wetland designations to become a pivotal issue in future Coastal development.

"We should not take this lightly."

As a potential development, she sees the Stennis Air Park to have a tremendous site advantage.

"We are right in the middle. Gulfport can't grow anymore. New Orleans can't. A concentrated air facility is needed and we are right in the middle. We are perfectly situated, plus the fact we are surrounded by the buffer zone."

"The support businesses that would be required would bring an economic benefit to this community beyond imagination."

Gex plans to continue her community involvement, along with operating her business, Hall of Fame.

She has served for the past five years on the Sand Beach Advisory Committee; is the current vice-president of the Private Industry Council; is on the Board of Regions of Mississippi Museum, Gulf Coast branch;

She has been on the Hancock County Planning Commission Citizen Advisory Committee for the past two years; a member of the Gulf Coast Arts Council and formerly on the board of directors; served three terms as secretary for the Board of Governors at the Bay-Waveland Yacht Club; one of the seven founders of the Nereids Carnival Organization, a member of the Hancock County Historical Society and the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce.

Gex has previously served as vice-president of the Gulf Pines Girl Scout Council; served on the Board of Directors of the Bay-Waveland Library System; held three offices as a member of the Bay St. Louis Junior Auxiliary; was a Red Cross volunteer following Hurricane Camille; was active for many years in the St. Clare Home-School Association; and served as a lay reader at St. Clare Catholic Church.

Goode murder trial moved

The capital murder trial of Charles Edwin Goode, scheduled to be held in Bay St. Louis, has been set for January 21 in Columbus.

Goode is charged with killing his 14-year-old cousin near Raymond during a February 20 burglary.

The trial had been moved from Raymond to Hancock County because of pre-trial publicity, but was then moved to Lowndes County because of scheduling conflicts here. Circuit Clerk Pam Metzler said the court is in the middle of a term and there is no room for another trial.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's Morning Edition will be held Friday, January 31, 8 a.m. at Hancock High School.

The program titled "America 2000" will be presented by Myrna Bourgeois, new Hancock County superintendent of education.

The Hancock School District is sponsor of this very important education program.

There will also be, for those who haven't seen this wonderful facility, special tours following the presentation which is scheduled for one hour.

Remember, this Morning Edition will begin at 8 a.m. I am hoping chamber members and the general public will mark their calendars for this important chamber event.

The Mississippi Legislature has begun its task in Jackson this past week, and some of the talked about things are the newly appointed committees in the Mississippi Senate.

Senator Vic Frankiewicz of Bay St. Louis appears to have his share of appointments this term.

He will chair a committee to Investigate State Offices and serve as vice-chairman of Fees, Salaries and Administration. He is a member of Agriculture, Constitution, Economic Development, Tourism and Parks, Finance and Ports & Marine Resources committees.

It should be an interesting Senate meet this year with Lt. Gov. Eddie Briggs reportedly replacing 15 of 18 returning committee chairmen.

Things should really be buzzing in Jackson on Tuesday as Gov.-elect Kirk Fordice takes his oath of office. It has been over 100 years since Mississippi has had a Republican governor.

I wish the best of luck to everyone in Jackson, especially our governor, senators and representatives, as they have a tremendous task facing them this year.

Cochran hails passage of 'Year of the Gulf Resolution'

U.S. Senator Thad Cochran said a congressional resolution to designate 1992 as the "Year of the Gulf" has won Senate approval.

"This resolution brings recognition to the Gulf of Mexico and its valuable contributions to the nation," Cochran said.

"The Gulf is one of our most valuable fisheries and it provides critical habitat for 75 percent of the migratory waterfowl in the United States.

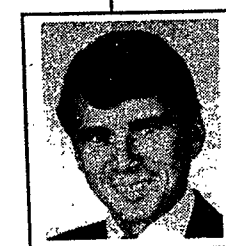

"Tourism, oil and gas development and ports in the Gulf provide significant economic benefits to the entire nation."

The resolution calls for a national education and awareness campaign geared to preserve and protect the Gulf. All five Gulf Coast states, including Mississippi, will work with federal agencies and volunteer organizations to conduct the year-long campaign. The Environmental Protection Agency's Gulf of Mexico Program office, located at the Stennis Space Center, is working to coordinate and organize environmental activities to preserve the Gulf, Cochran said.

"The Gulf of Mexico is a national treasure and its resources must be protected," he added.

Cochran joined Senators Phil Gramm, Trent Lott and Connie Mack in sponsoring the resolution, which now goes to the President for his signature.

IN CONGRESS

By Rep. Gene Taylor

Free trade agreement harmful to Mississippi's economy

Currently, many of America's manufacturers are weighing the pros and cons of transplanting U.S. operations to Mexico, in the event that the United States-Mexico Free Trade agreement is approved during the 102nd Congress.

The Administration's desire for free trade with Mexico could have a disastrous effect on our nation's and South Mississippi's economy. Twenty-five percent of Mississippi's workforce is employed in manufacturing.

It is time now for Congress to take care of the American worker. Cheap Mexican labor has already turned American eyes toward the southern half of the globe. Low wages combined with free trade, could have a disastrous effect on our manufacturers, our national security and on the American taxpayer.

The proposed United States-Mexico Free Trade agreement will speed the decline of the American manufacturer's ability to survive for the simple reason that profit driven manufacturers will flock to Mexico to save money. America's manufacturers pay higher wages, workman's compensation, provide safety in the workplace and live within strict pollution guidelines.

With the passage of "fast track," which allows the U.S. State Department to negotiate the American-Mexican agreement without interference from Congress until a final treaty is signed by the President, our Mexican counterparts will have tariff free access to our markets at a fraction of the cost.

While this will have the effect of allowing a manufacturer-importer who relocates to Mexico to maximize his profits, it reduces the opportunities for the young people in this country. Those profits will come at the expense of Americans.

Historically, the world's greatest nations have been great maritime powers and great manufacturers. In my lifetime America has gone from the world's foremost maritime power to a nation that had to charter over 80 foreign-flag and owned ships in order to resupply American forces during Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm. What must we give away, our manufacturing might as well?

Instead of seeking ways to "fast track" the decline of American industry, President Bush and Congress should be working to reward those individuals who have chosen to remain in America and in encouraging others to locate and expand here.

Instead of giving tax breaks to U.S. manufacturers who have operations in Mexico, and import Mexican made products to America, we should provide investment tax credits to U.S. manufacturers who purchase U.S. raw materials and produce American-made products.

The only logical business-like approach for a nation with a

Resolution

He then opened the floor for discussion among the commissioners by reading a list of points to consider.

COMMISSIONERS' COMMENTS

Clementine Williams stated, "Personally, I can live with this. I've lived in Bay St. Louis all my life. I like the beauty, the serenity of Bay St. Louis."

"Gaming has been voted in by the public. We are commissioned to vote on this resolution. I think our city fathers, they have spent over $100,000 for this study done, and I would think that they would control and see to this being done in a proper manner."

Tommy Chapman reiterated comments, made at a Monday commission meeting, that he is not in favor of the Bay bridge site for a development. He said he wanted to make several recommendations, most of which concurred with Reynolds's list.

Chapman's recommendations included:

1. Urging the city to hire a planning director with the proper professional background and experience;
2. Encouraging the council to adopt those parts of the National Fire Protection Association's Life Safety Code that will allow the city to regulate structures involved in dockside gambling (boats, piers, etc.) from a fire safety standpoint;
3. Requiring the developer to make a detailed traffic study of the area to be affected by his development, and submit the study to the city;
4. Making certain evacuation measures are a strong priority for the city to ensure safety in the event of a fire, hurricane or other disaster.

Kevin Fitzpatrick said he is disposed to approve the Bay bridge site, but he has several reservations about the proposed amendment.

Many of his comments ran along lines similar to those voiced by Chapman and Reynolds. Fitzpatrick mentioned the need for a city planner, the adoption of the Life Safety Codes, strong evacuation procedures, regulation of vessel dimensions and dredging spoils sites, and the inclusion of input from the Federal Emergency Management Agency and its state office.

Scaffide, who attended the meeting as city attorney, suggested the commission list their concerns in a separate recommendation for the City Council's consideration.

Linda Beauregard said, "I feel comfortable with the resolution, and I think we should vote on it and move on."

Les Fillingame said he also has reservations, but contended that the proposed resolution has nothing to do specifically with Mardi Gras Casino.

He added that he didn't see the need to include in the resolution a provision calling for a city planner. "We're allowing (the Bay bridge site) to be zoned for (a gaming development), and if we adopt (the resolution) with the site plan review, we should have all the leverage we need to regulate."

"I think we're trying to anticipate tonight everything that could happen, and I don't think we can do that."

Robert Weaver agreed with Fillingame that the commission's meeting Thursday did not specifically deal with Mardi Gras Casino. He also agreed with Reynolds about the need for a city planner.

Saying he is comfortable with the resolution, Weaver stated, "I think we're overreacting to a point, because we're trying to say and do and we don't know what's going to happen yet."

PUBLIC COMMENT

Sandra Roberson, owner of the Asleigh Manor Hotel on Hwy. 90, referred to a letter from Sarah Benvenuti which was read at the start of the meeting. Roberson said that while she, like Benvenuti, sees and appreciates the beauty in Bay St. Louis, she also sees the unpleasant side of the city — unemployment, poverty, ugliness in people's lives.

"We do need to provide jobs," she stated. "We do need to be progressive and aggressive."

Walter Chamberlain addressed the proposed resolution, saying some of the revisions (one was the inclusion of the site plan review; others were changes in language) were less stringent than their original wordings.

Carroll Gordon addressed the question of bottomlands leases. He asked if the city would have any input, or if the state will be able to override local preferences in granting leases.

Attorney Donald Rafferty said Secretary of State attorney Margaret Bretz in Gulfport told him the state is including a clause in its bottomlands leases saying the state will respect city laws and zoning ordinances.

Mardi Gras Casino land acquisition official Don Tyner said he is pleased with the resolution, and told the commissioners it gives the city opportunities to help the development in creative ways.

"I would encourage you not to clutter this ordinance tonight with provisions to hire a full-time watchdog for that one development," he added.

proper educational/experience credentials to oversee any waterfront, over water or major developments in the city;

2. Require completion of a detailed traffic study, to be funded by the developer and submitted with the site plan, prior to the issuance of any local permits;

3. Adopt those sections of the NFPA 101 Life Safety Code that apply to vessels, docks, marinas and piers;

4. Reserve the right to have input into evacuation procedures set by regulatory agencies in regard to vessel dimensions and their ability to leave the area without damage to the existing Bay bridge (railroad and car) structures;

5. Require a surety bond from the site developer to ensure that the city has funds to demolish or revise any structures for use by local citizens in the event of default or abandonment of the site;

6. Request input with the regulatory agencies involved in the choice of dredging spoils sites regarding the maintenance of the canal site;

7. Require the developer to meet all FEMA/EMMA regulations;

8. Require substantial completion of the gaming vessel's exterior upon mooring at the gaming site.

$3.4 trillion national debt and a $100 billion a year trade deficit is to require foreign manufacturers who use our ship channels, ports, highways and airports to pay for these services. Mexico should pay for these services just like their American counterparts do.

If tariffs on Mexican products are eliminated, then the free traders should tell us what programs they intend to cut because of the loss of revenue, or what additional taxes they intend to place on the American people.

Finally, in the past few years, the American taxpayer has seen Social Security, gasoline, cigarette and alcohol taxes skyrocket while the free traders cut taxes on Mexico. Why is there a fear of taxing the Mexicans? Who are we running this country for?

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire
Caire

Oysters are among my favorite foods, from fried to fancy; and one of my favorite recipes is called "Oysters O'Hurry" because I concocted it some years ago in a great hurry for Sunday supper guests!

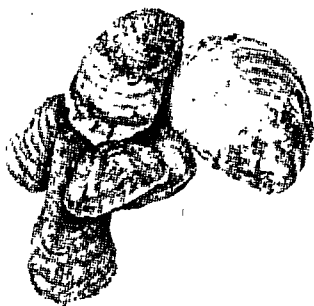

I had made the discovery shortly before supper time that afternoon long ago that a goodly portion of the pork chops destined for the meal had been devoured by my then-teen-aged sons and a couple of their friends (my fault: I had forgotten to place the family "Paws Off" sign atop).

The oysters planned for appetizers had to be turned into the entree for Sunday supper; and there weren't that many oysters on hand in the fridge! So, with lots of rice and French bread, the appetizer stretched to a tasty main course, one which we've enjoyed often through the years. Here's:

OYSTERS O'HURRY
3 dozen medium oysters
2 Tbsp. oil
2 Tbsp. flour
1 medium onion, finely chopped
3 green onions, chopped
1 crushed clove garlic
1/2 cup celery, chopped
A few sprigs parsley, chopped
1/2 cup dry white wine
Dashes of black pepper, salt to your taste
1 can artichoke hearts, quartered
1 cup mushrooms, fresh or canned or bottled

Heat the oysters in their liquor over a low fire, just until the edges curl. Set aside. Make a roux (basis of most Creole and Cajun cookery) by browning the flour in the oil over so slowly, over low heat, stirring all the while. Add the onions, celery and garlic and saute until soft.

Add the seasonings and enough oyster liquor to make a thick mixture, along with the wine, as well as the artichoke hearts and mushrooms. Add the oysters, and at this point decide whether you plan to serve the oysters with a thicker sauce (just cook a little longer) in a casserole or individual ramekins or patty shells; or whether you wish to serve this dish (thinned a bit if needed with oyster liquor or wine) from a chafing dish or other warmed dish, to ladle over hot parsleyed rice. Just be sure to have plenty of French bread on hand for mopping up the remnants of the delicious sauce in either case.

If you prefer to use fresh artichokes (as I often do when I'm somewhat more ambitious and the "price is right" at the market, steam 3 artichokes over lightly salted water until fork-tender at the stems.

Cool, separate leaves from the heart, reserving the leaves for dipping into the sauce, if you wish. Chop the hearts, and add to the oyster mixture.

I also prefer fresh mushrooms, leaving them whole or slicing them according to my mood and adding to the roux when I saute the onions, etc.

REFLECTIONS ON LIFE

By Father Jerome
LeDoux, SVD

To hear Wilt Chamberlain tell it, human is ugly, seamy, dirty and obscene. In his new book, "A View From Above," the St. Louis brags that he had more than 20,000 sexual encounters. The amazing thing is that he could keep count.

Even "Magic" Johnson might have related to the bragging of Wilt "The Stilt" not long ago. Now, even though he may not state it publicly, he must consider Wilt's escapades to more than so much stupidity and gross indiscretion.

Humanity always exacts a price sooner or later, not to mention the destruction of any meaningful human relations. Now, however, it is in a position to impose an even greater penalty: the death penalty called AIDS.

The fragility, the frailty and precarious mortality of even the strongest human beings shrink all of us to the size of mites. After all, what are we compared to a gargantuan six-foot-nine-inch, well-muscled Magic Johnson?

A very limited disaster list is formidable enough to send nervous shudders through the whole world of athletic entertainment, not to mention the athletes themselves.

Most recently, the lightning demise of Len Bias and Hank Gathers in basketball and of Don Rogers in football grabbed the attention of every one, especially the very young.

Headline grabbers of the year were George Herman "Babe" Ruth who died of throat cancer at the age of 53, and the indestructible Lou "The Iron Horse" Gehrig who died of the nerve disease named after him at the age of 39.

Somehow, we would like to believe that we are maybe only a little mortal. We would like to bask in the superhuman aura of a Magic Johnson who can lift the whole of humanity a notch above our lowly, insecure level.

But then Magic dashed our illusions which we may have had by showing beyond the shadow of a doubt that his magic does not work when it comes to viruses and death sentences.

In telling us that he had accommodated as many women as possible in his sexual explorations, Magic assured us that his magic worked as well with women as it did on the court. However, his magic obviously failed its medical test.

When I first heard that Jesus had to grow up from being a baby, I felt offense at the thought that he did not know everything at the very beginning of his life. This seemed to indicate a defect, a vulnerability in Jesus which belied the uniqueness and transcendent power of his Messiahship.

On further thought, and especially after further and more painful experiences in life, it became very comforting to realize just how human Jesus was. Whatever strength is found in our humanness is there because of Jesus' identity with us.

His weakness is our strength: "Christ Jesus... though he was in the form of God, did not regard equality with God something to be grasped. Rather, he emptied himself, taking the form of a slave, coming in human likeness" (Phil. 2:6-7).

When Magic Johnson and Babe Ruth showed us their glaring human weakness by succumbing to the penalties of their own indiscretions, they made us feel more vulnerable.

On the contrary, Jesus brought us nothing but the strength of the Most Holy Trinity by assuming our weakness.

Human is now holy

Laying the foundation

The construction of the Bay Cove Marina access road adopts the use of a petroleum based sheeting upon which limestone is spread. According to a Neca Brothers Construction Company foreman the sheeting increases compaction along with reducing water retention. This innovative technique was first applied in Long Beach within the past eight months. The Bay Cove access road will be the first road in Hancock County to fully utilize the sheeting process. The limestone is to be sealed with black-topping. (Echo staff photo by Jacqui Cochran)

Develop a plan by visualizing an extension of indoor living area

BY RANDALL SMITH
County Agent

A gangster (yeah, a real credible source) once said that he accredited his success to a good gun, a good alibi and a good plan. I have serious problems with the gun, and definitely hope I never need an alibi. Now a plan is pertinent in all walks of life, including landscaping.

Face it folks, most landscapes have no rhyme or reason. People plop shade trees here, some evergreen shrubs there, and before you know it a nonfunctional mess is created.

However, if six basic steps; developing a plot plan; conducting a site analysis; assessing family needs; locating use areas; developing use areas; and developing a final planting plan are followed, disaster can be avoided.

Developing the plan might be easier if the landscape is considered an extension of your indoor living area.

First, visualize what you want the landscape to look like from inside your home.

Go outside and imagine your lot as a room with the ground and grass being the floor and carpet, the property lines being the walls and the sky represented by overhead structures.

By spending time in the undeveloped landscape, you advantage of or screen them.

The third step in developing a landscape is to list the family's wants and needs. The need assessment stage identifies developmental goals (present and future) and sets priorities based on time and money.

USE AREAS

Stage four is to locate outdoor use areas (public, private and service areas). These areas are related to activity areas within the home and are basically an extension of the home's indoor living areas.

The front entrance, entrance hall and formal living room are considered public areas. Private areas include family, recreation and dining rooms. Service areas include areas for conducting on-going activities (kitchen, pantry, etc.).

Once the use areas have been identified, extend them to outdoor areas. Using clean tracing paper over the plot plan, trace the property lines, house, existing features and indicate the extended areas separate of each other with bold dotted lines. As you develop each

However, there are some tips to consider when developing a foundation planting: accenting the main entrance, avoiding competing elements, creating visual balance, avoiding a congested look by using plants in scale with the house and by using plants and construction materials requiring low-maintenance.

Outdoor living areas

design adhering to the proper plant spacing.

Using a template, first draw shade trees, foundation plants and screens.

Before performing this process, visit nurseries and local libraries to learn about plant materials.

Yes, this process is lengthy but well worth the effort. If you have questions about landscaping, contact your trained local nurseryman or call your local Extension Office for a copy of the "Planning The Home Landscape Packet."

So until we meet again, this is H. Randall saying, you don't have to be a gangster to know that planning can create a peaceful and serene landscape environment.

include privacy structures, terraces and open lawn areas. Privacy areas should create a sanctuary of secluded beauty and tranquility. This can be accomplished with plantings, fences or a combination.

TERRACES

Terraces, a popular segment of the outdoor living area, should accommodate entertainment and extend the indoor living area (locate terraces near kitchens or dens).

Terraces should provide pleasing views and offer a shaded, unconfined environment free of plants with spines or plants that attract bees.

When a terrace is designed, it should comfortably accommodate each member of the largest group you anticipate entertaining in addition to seating areas.

Outdoor living areas open require an open lawn. Small lawns that are unobstructed and have peripheral beds possessing borders of straight lines and gentle curves are attractive and easy to maintain.

Nowhere is it written in the book of life that a lawn has to be huge and difficult to manage.

Why my good friend and renowned horticulturist Feller Rushing has no turf, only flower beds, in his garden. We'll discount his small strip (1' by 3') of zoyia grass that justifies his antiquated push, reel mower.

Outdoor service areas combine the services necessary for operating a household (garbage cans, clothes lines, firewood and etc.) These areas are usually not attractive, should be clustered and may require screening. Whatever you do, never block yourself out and always provide access from service areas to the public, private and home's indoor areas.

separate area, consider how they will look when later combined in the overall plan.

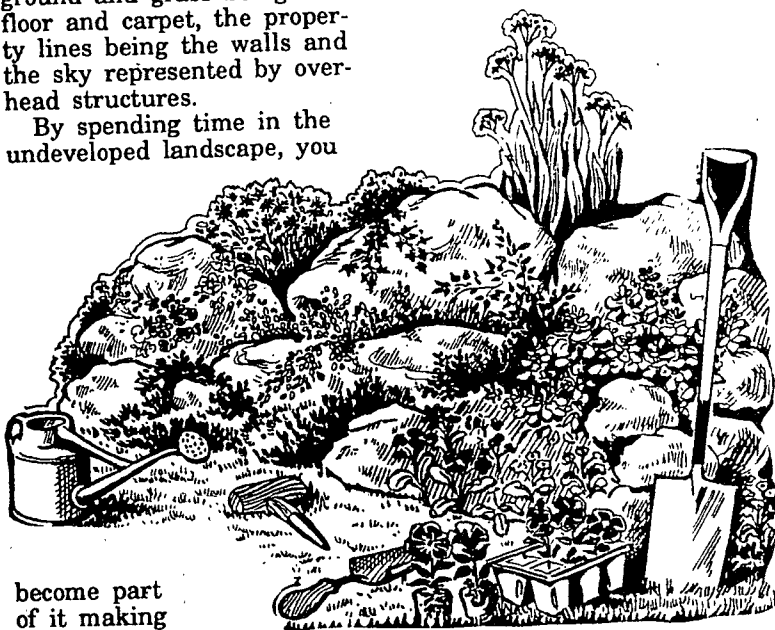

Public areas are those (driveways, walks, plantings and etc.) seen from the street. Driveways and walks probably exist but can be changed if they are not functional.

Walks should provide a smooth surface in a straight line or gentle curve. They should generally provide the shortest route between two points, provide easy access between outdoor and private areas and reduce traffic going through the house. A comfortable walk should be a minimum of 4.5 feet wide and steep walks can be avoided by using steps.

FOUNDATION PLANTINGS

Most folks consider foundation plantings the most important part of the landscape. Homes are often needlessly engulfed by these plantings ignoring the home's intrinsic beauty.

Because of changing architectural styles, these plantings have become less important. Some now consider peripheral plantings as become part of it making decisions easier.

BASE PLAN

The first planning step is to develop a base plan. This bird's eye view locates property lines, house, drives, walks, fences, utility lines, existing trees and other important features.

Once you have made accurate measurements, transfer the measurements to a final scaled plot plan.

The final plot plan is conducted by first locating front and/or side streets, drawing compass directions noting all property restrictions, easements and right-of-ways.

Always avoid permanent plantings or construction in easement areas commonly used for widening streets and accommodating utilities. Once you have determined the easements, draw property lines and the house.

Also note utilities (above and underground) and other fixed structures (retaining walls, fences, etc.), then locate all existing plant materials, natural features (ditches, ravines and steep slopes) and neighboring buildings.

SITE ANALYSIS

The next step is development of a site analysis. This environmental inventory denotes seasonal sun movement, wind direction, soil type and condition, drainage, erosion and bad or noisy areas.

Notes are then made on tracing paper over-laying the cardboard supported plot plan.

Here are some tips to generalize sun and wind movement. In Mississippi, the summer sun rises in the northeast, is almost directly overhead at noon and sets slightly to the northwest. The winter sun moves from the southeast to the southwest.

The three coastal counties enjoy a southerly Gulf breeze during most of the year, so plan screens to take advantage of this.

Following these notations, soil types, chemical composition and condition, water drainage and areas are reviewed. Be sure to note any good/bad views and noise areas in order to take

Mallini wins Marine Technology poster contest

Leanne Mallini of Bay St. Louis, a master's student in the University of Southern Mississippi Center for Marine Sci-

The research examined an analytical technique that is faster, easier and less costly than conventional analytical techniques used for measuring trace quantities of manganese.

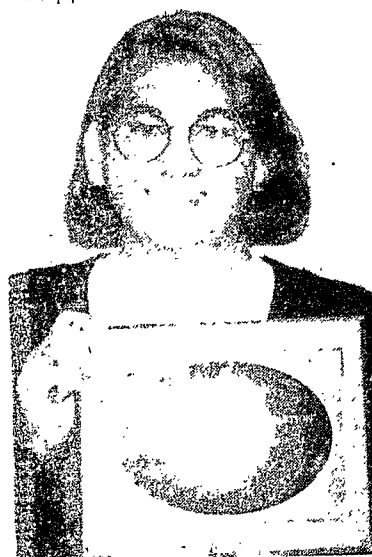

A flow analysis system, which can be converted for analysis of several other trace elements, has potential in field studies, including those focusing on pollution monitoring.

The work is part of a research program directed by Shiller at the center, a project Mallini joined after receiving a Sea Grant Fellowship and a research grant from the Gulf Coast Association of Geological Societies (GCAGS).

Mallini, the daughter of James and Jeannette Mallini of Bay St. Louis, received a bachelor of science degree in biology from USM in 1987.

A 1980 graduate of Bay Senior High School, she is pursuing a master's degree in marine science with a chemical emphasis.

Leanne Mallini

ence, won the Marine Technology Society (MTS) Student Technical Poster Session Competition during the society's conference in New Orleans.

Her presentation was selected for the award from among 35 submitted by students across the United States and Great Britain. She received a plaque, two volumes of Proceedings of the 1991 MTS conference and an MTS membership.

Stennis Space Center offers Oceanography Workshop Jan. 16

NASA's John C. Stennis Space Center will host an Oceanography Workshop for middle and secondary school teachers from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 16 in the Teacher Resource Center, Building 1200.

The workshop will present an overview of the basic physics involved in oceanography and the types of research currently being conducted in the oceans of the world. Through the workshop, teachers will be able to apply these concepts to school courses in earth science, biology, marine biology, and physical science.

Capt. Robert Plante, Chief of Staff for the Commander, Naval Oceanography Command (CNOC) at Stennis, will give an overview of the Naval oceanography program followed by a presentation from Lt. Cmdr. Debra Poffenberger with CNOC on oceanography from space. Other speakers will include representatives from the U.S. Navy and the University of Southern Mississippi.

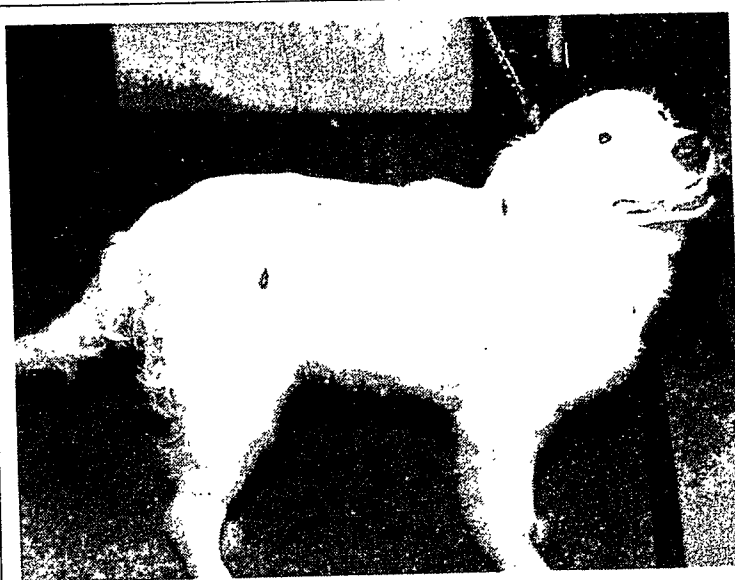

In a presentation given by Cmdr. George Schwenke with CNOC, teachers will learn ways to increase student interest in oceanography, how teachers can obtain information concerning oceanography, and ways to highlight areas of special interest in the classroom, such as global warming and flooding.

To make reservations for this free workshop or for a complete list of workshops offered at Stennis during the Spring of 1992, call the Teacher Resource Center at (601) 688-3338.
